FLEXIBLE ENTERPRISE SOFTWARE IS CHANGING BUSINESS

Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) software has always offered the same things: Integrated systems that allow all departments within a business to "talk" to each other, so that business stakeholders have insight into every aspect of their business. Right?

WHAT IS ERP?

Well, it turns out there are ERP systems, and then there are ERP systems. However, before we get into that, what exactly is ERP? ERP is essentially what the name says: a system that allows enterprises or businesses to plan the use of their resources effectively, and hopefully improve their bottom line in the process.

It is actually a bit of a dated term that doesn't quite convey what it really does, but for better or worse the term "ERP" has stuck and most businesses understand what it's meant to do: streamline complex business operations where patchwork, uncommunicative systems are not able to.

SO, WHAT HAS CHANGED?

At one of our recent client meetings, the engineering business owner kept asking: "So how do you do this or that in BOSEnterprise?" It was a simple question, but it was monumental. Like most ERPs, BOSEnterprise provides core business functionality like sales management, CRM, shop-floor data, estimating and quotes, job tracking, time tracking, stock management, accounting, and reports with ease. But this question highlighted how the landscape of ERPs like BOSEnterprise is changing the way we do business. My answer will show you why. I said: "How do you want BOSEnterprise to do it?"

ENTERPRISE SOFTWARE THAT DOES WHATEVER YOU WANT

There are many off-the-shelf ERP systems available, however, they force every aspect of how the business operates to bend to the way the software operates. With BOSEnterprise, the system yields 100% to how the business operates. It supports any workflow, business process, or outcome that you desire.

All that it takes is our business agents spending some time with you to understand your business, your challenges, and your desired outcomes. You tell us what you want, and we give it to you – the permutations are endless.

WHY LOCAL IS BETTER

Most business owners understand that there is a cost upfront for setup and optimisation of ERPs. The great thing about a locally designed, built, and supported system, like BOSEnterprise, is that the setup cost is not at all excessive, compared to international brands that can go into the hundreds of thousands.

Then, after setup, it's a matter of an affordable monthly subscription that keeps you connected to your locally hosted, or cloud-hosted, BOSEnterprise.

Business software has never been this authentic, this personalised, and this versatile. It is easy to see why flexible enterprise software is changing the way we do business.
